Radar units coming in two weeks.

Enforcement by firm tapped by province to operate in highway construction zones is about 'maximizing fines,' not safety: Critic

ROSS ROMANIUK
ross.romaniuk@metronews.ca

The Saskatchewan government is under fire from critics after the province selected a photo-radar contractor that has been the centre of controversy in Winnipeg's traffic enforcement for a decade.

Todd Dube, spokesman for the Wise-Up Winnipeg group that advocates against what it charges are abuses in that city's use of photograph-radar, said Thursday that Saskatchewan drivers are going to soon learn that such enforcement is about revenue generation rather than safety.

"Their mandate is simple — it's maximum violations to show their partner big dollars," Dube alleged of ACS Public Sector Solutions, the firm used in Winnipeg and confirmed on Thursday as the contractor for photo-radar in Saskatchewan highway construction zones.

"And once those dollars start flowing, that's when they really tu(rn) it up," Dube said of government officials.

"Then it's expanded to school zones and playground zones."

But Drew Wilby of the Ministry of Corrections and Policing said the Saskatchewan government will, "right now," use ACS and its mobile operators "strictly in construction work zones on highways" where signs mark speed limits of 60 km/h.

"Our priority is public safety," Wilby said.

"All it allows for right now is on highways in the orange zones, in construction zones. So by legislation, that's the only area in the province that photo-radar can take place at present."

The radar units, he added, will be running in various work zones in about two weeks.

Dube has long argued that photo-radar in Winnipeg is most heavily used where signs are insufficiently posted to mark speed limits and school zones.

"They keep maximizing fines, and the public gets progressively more angry," he said.

"Saskatchewan people are going to have to experience it before they see what this industry is all about."

Telecommunications

SaskTel worth $2 billion if traded publicly: Report

Centre for Pubic Policy says the province could benefit from privatizing SaskTel, Saskatchewan's Crown-owned telecommunications provider.

The report explains that SaskTel would be worth up to $2.17 billion if it were traded on the public stock exchange.

The report's author, Ian Madsen, said a sale of the corporation could go a long way toward making the company more profitable while also assisting the residents of Saskatchewan.

"The main benefit would be that the money that is locked into the company would then be available to the citizens and the taxpayers of Saskatchewan to use for other things," said Madsen. "To pay down debt, improve infrastructure, lower taxes or a combination of those things."

Modern communication, he said, has addressed a lot of service issues that had made Crown ownership a good idea long ago.

"The reason that it was a government entity is probably because Saskatchewan was — and still is — rather sparsely populated, a million people spread over a very wide area and many of them in farms, small towns and villages. So it was hard to get landlines to everyone," Madsen explained. "Cellular has, of course, changed that."

While the market value of SaskTel is pegged at about $2 billion, Madsen said the intrinsic value of the corporation is likely between $1.58 billion and $3.16 billion.

Regina's yacht club celebrates 100th year

Updated. The club constructed a $3-million facility with a huge wrap-around deck, boat-shaped bar

ALYSSA MCDONALD
alyssa.mcdonald@metronews.ca

The Regina Beach Yacht Club might be a century old, but its splashy digs are brand new.

The private-members club, located in Buena Vista off Last Mountain Lake, has put the finishing touches on its new clubhouse after its previous facility was decimated by a flood in 2011.

"Try and tell me somewhere else where you can get this view," Calvin Hill, who serves on the club's board of directors, said on Thursday while looking out at the lake from the deck — rebuilt three times the size of the original.

The old clubhouse — which had been converted from a railway station into a yacht clubhouse in 1913 — had to be torn down, though the club was able to salvage its ground wooden deck and old marina.

The club constructed a $3-million facility with a huge wrap-around deck, gas-filling dock, boat-shaped bar and a widow's peak on the roof in a tribute to the old building. It was also built on a cement pad raft to protect it from any future flooding.

"So far, the reaction has been, 'Wow' — there is no other word for it than, 'Wow,'" said Hill.

"An amazing job has been done, and we look forward to not so much the past but the present and the future, experiencing here."

To celebrate the centennial, the club is opening its gates to the public this weekend and is expected to draw hundreds of people.

The club is usually private with two kinds of paid memberships. It currently has a two-year waiting list for boat slips, but is hoping to get new general members from the weekend celebrations.

Saskatchewan didn't look the way it does today when Canada became a country in 1867, but without our beloved province, our home and native land just wouldn't be the same

regina@metronews.ca

5 reasons to feel patriotic

1 Cumberland House

The area currently battling massive flood threats, was the location of the most important Hudson's Bay Trading Post in 1774, allowing the fur trade to flow east to west with greater ease.

2 Louis Riel

As the man who fought for Manitoba's borders, Riel's fight to secure equal rights for Métis rose to a head in Saskatchewan, where the resistance ultimately came to a bitter end at Batoche.

3 Settlers needed

With brutal, but fertile lands, the virtually untouched Saskatchewan prairie attracted a wide variety of European settlers, ultimately paving the way for today's uniquely diverse Canadian cultural landscape.

4 Health care

While it is more recent in the province's history, Tommy Douglas' groundbreaking idea of health care for all would forever change the face of Canada, forcing it to be the country we know and love today.

5 Grey Owl

Grey Owl is seen as the forerunner for the modern environmental movement with his message that "humans belong to nature." The first naturalist for Prince Albert National Park, his wilderness books won audiences worldwide, only to loose reputation when it was discovered he lied about his Native ancestry. Recently his contributions to the conservation movement have won renewed praise.

Activists burn their cause into bodies, minds

Animal-rights activists use a hot iron to brand one of their own with the number 269 in Prague on Wednesday. Ten others had the same done to their bodies. The movement 269 Life was launched with a public branding in Tel Aviv last year and has since mushroomed around the globe. The group, like other animal liberation movements, opposes the use of animals for human consumption, research or entertainment, going far beyond demands by more moderate groups. The group's name is derived from a number branded on a calf that activists encountered at an Israeli dairy farm last year. PETR DAVID JOSEK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mail-order bride ring busted in Philippines

Human trafficking. Women promised wealth and security end up abused, unhappy

Philippine authorities have rescued 29 women after busting a mail-order bride business and arresting two South Koreans and their four local partners, a police official said Thursday.

Police raided a house Wednesday in Bacoor city near Manila used by the syndicate and found the women, including a 16-year-old girl, said Chief Superintendent Reginald Villasanta, executive director of the Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Commission.

The syndicate collects thousands of dollars in fees from Korean men seeking Filipino wives, telling them falsely that the money will go to the women's families, Villasanta said.

Villasanta says the women are promised a prosperous life in South Korea but often end up abused or in unhappy marriages.

A messy investigation

Chief Superintendent Reginald Villasanta says there are an estimated 10,000 Filipino women married to South Koreans.

"We have rescued 29 (Filipino women) who were duped into promises of an instant wealthy life through marriage with Korean gentlemen, although in most cases they ended up on the losing end after becoming victims of grave abuses," Villasanta said.

Poverty and the lack of employment have forced millions of Filipinos to find work abroad and some to seek marriage with foreigners, most with hopes of a better life and being able to support their families back home.

Congo. Rape of nine girls, the youngest 18 months old, rattles UN officials

The UN is raising the alarm about the recent rape of nine young girls in conflict-ridden eastern Congo, the youngest 18 months old. Two of the girls died, though their ages weren't released.

Two officials say the girls were admitted to Panzi Hospital in South Kivu province over the past two months with serious internal wounds.

UN special representative to Congo Roger Meece and UNICEF representative Barbara Bentein released their statement through UN deputy spokesman Eduardo del Buey on Thursday.

Disturbing crimes

The UN has said various armed groups are behind rapes in eastern Congo. The Congolese army and M23 rebels also have been accused of rapes.

The officials said two suspects have been arrested, but they urged Congolese authorities to follow through with the "prosecution of all perpetrators involved in this despicable practice."

Vancouver man guilty of human trafficking

A B.C. Supreme Court jury found a Vancouver man guilty of human trafficking Wednesday night, which Franco Yiu Kwan Orr's lawyer says is a first in Canada.

Orr was also found guilty of employing a foreign national, specifically his Filipino nanny Leticia Sarmiento, illegally, and making a misrepresentation that could induce an error in the administration of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act.

However, the jury acquitted his partner, Oi Ling Nicole Huen, of human trafficking and employing a foreign national illegally.

The Crown declined to comment on the verdict.

U.K. pedophile sex ring

7 men convicted of 'exceptionally grave crimes'

Seven men in Britain were given long jail sentences Thursday for sexually exploiting girls as young as 11 who were given alcohol and drugs before being trafficked for sex.

The men were convicted last month at London's Central Criminal Court of charges including rape, trafficking and child prostitution.

Prosecutors said the men were part of a pedophile sex ring that exploited girls between 2004 and 2012 in the Oxford area, 95 kilometres northwest of London.

Judge Peter Rook imposed sentences ranging from seven years to a minimum of 20 years.

Calgary mayor blasts CP Rail after bridge fails over river

'Looking for a lot of answers'. Mayor Naheed Nenshi and CP CEO Hunter Harrison agree to work more on safety together in the future

Calgary's mayor says Canadian Pacific Railway has apologized for the chaos caused by a train that derailed after a bridge over the swollen Bow River failed.

Naheed Nenshi says he's had a conversation with CP CEO Hunter Harrison and they both agreed to work together more on safety.

Nenshi lashed out at CP earlier in the day, suggesting the company did a poor job inspecting its bridge after a recent flooding.

"How is it we don't have regulatory authority over this, but it's my guys down there risking their lives to fix it?" Nenshi asked earlier Thursday.

"Certainly once this crisis is over, I'll be looking for a lot of answers from a lot of people. When was that bridge inspected? Why was it not inspected after Saturday? Remember, on Saturday the Bow River was still running higher than anyone had ever seen in their lifetimes," Nenshi said.

"I'll be very blunt. I'll probably get in trouble for saying this," Nenshi added. "We've seen a lot of people lose their jobs at CP over the last year. How many bridge inspectors did they fire?"

Harrison said several inspections were done on the bridge, adding that the structure was checked five times after floodwaters rose, but piers at the bottom of the river failed.

He says divers would normally have been sent down to look at the bottom of the bridge, but the water was too murky and swift to do that safely.

He said the bridge's failure is as "extraordinary" as the heavy rains and flooding in southern Alberta.

NDP reaction

Federal NDP transport critic Olivia Chow said the federal government has to stop allowing rail companies to conduct their own inspections.

- "They can do their own inspections, but the federal government — or some level of government — need to inspect bridges," she said.

Propane company guilty in 2008 Toronto blast

Site of the Sunrise Propane explosion in Toronto in 2008. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

An Ontario company was convicted Thursday of violating environmental and labour regulations in connection with the 2008 explosion of a propane plant in Toronto that killed a man and forced thousands from their homes.

Sunrise Propane and its directors, Shay Ben-Moshe and Valery Belahov, were found guilty of nine charges in relation to the early-morning blast.

The court ruled Sunrise failed to provide safety training and a safe working environment, discharged a contaminant and contravened a number of provincial orders related to the cleanup after the blast.

The court also found Ben-Moshe and Belahov failed to take all reasonable care to prevent the company from flouting those orders.

Sunrise defence lawyer Leo Adler said both he and his clients were disappointed with the verdict, which could amount to millions of dollars in fines for the company.

Ontario government lawyers argued training negligence contributed to the blast that killed employee Parminder Saini, 25, and rained debris on the surrounding area. Bob Leek, 55, a firefighter who responded to the emergency on his day off, also died of a heart attack.

According to the government, the initial blast occurred when propane vapours ignited during a risky truck-to-truck transfer.

Harvin Pitch — lead counsel in a class action representing members of the community — said his clients were delighted by Thursday's ruling.

"It's very helpful to have a verdict that the judge recognizes the negligence on the part of Sunrise and its officers," he said, adding that his clients could be entitled to a collective multi-million dollar settlement.

The court will reconvene July 23 to set a date for the sentencing of Sunrise and its directors.

Quebec

Feds a step closer to eliminating long-gun registry

The Harper government has won the latest round in its battle to delete the last remaining portion of the federal long-gun registry.

Quebec's highest court has ruled against the provincial government there, as it fights to keep data for the province from being destroyed as it has elsewhere.

The Quebec Court of Appeal said the province has no right to the registry data.

The registry could, in theory, be destroyed in two weeks. The ruling said the government must wait that long before deleting the Quebec data.

Philippines. Women held captive wanted to tell of minority's plight: Family

Amnesty International and the family of two Filipino-Algerian sisters called for suspected Islamic militants to release the women, saying Thursday that they are human-rights defenders and filmmakers who focused on the plight of Muslims in the Philippines.

Nadjoua and Linda Bansil were taken by about 10 suspected Abu Sayyaf militants Saturday in the southern town of Patikul while working on a short film about Muslim coffee farmers. At least three companions of the sisters were left behind, police said.

Their brother, Mohammed Bansil, noted that his sisters were seized while tackling the very issues at the root of the decades-old minority Muslim unrest in the country's south.

Ritz Lee Santos, who heads Amnesty International Philippines, said the sisters are longtime human rights volunteers.

"It's sad that they were taken because they went to Sulu to tell the whole country about the struggles of poor Muslims," he said.

Jailed Muslims formed prison gangs: Warden

Terrorism. Judge is told John Walker Lindh, other Muslims, bullied fellow inmates when allowed to pray together in groups

The warden of a U.S. prison holding American Taliban fighter John Walker Lindh insisted Thursday that he was obeying a court order to allow daily group prayer by permitting inmates to pray in pairs within their cells.

Warden John Oliver told a federal judge that when the prison allowed group prayer earlier this year, Muslim inmates formed gangs and bullied other prisoners.

Lindh attended the hearing by video conference from the high-security prison that houses him and about 40 other inmates, including several convicted on terror charges.

A U.S. District judge ruled in January that barring Lindh and his fellow Muslims from engaging in daily group prayer violates a 1993 law that bans the government from curtailing religious speech. The judge issued an order demanding that the prison allow group prayer.

Ken Falk, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Indiana, filed a motion in Lindh's name in April asking the judge to find the prison warden in contempt. The motion argued that the warden allowed only three group prayers per day in a single room, instead of the five that Lindh said his faith requires.

But Oliver said he believed he was balancing inmates' religious rights with the security needs of the special unit that severely restricts inmates' communications with the outside world. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Schooner missing. Last call from vessel with 7 aboard was about storm

A New Zealand meteorologist took the last known calls from the seven people aboard an American schooner: "The weather's turned nasty, how do we get away from it?"

The phone calls and texts ended June 4. More than three weeks later, searchers said Thursday they have grave concerns for the crew on the classic 85-year-old wooden vessel that went missing while sailing from New Zealand to Australia.

Authorities say the skipper of the 70-foot vessel Nina is American David Dyche. They say there are two other American men and three American women aboard, aged between 17 and 73. Also aboard is a British man, aged 35.

Kevin Banaghan, who is spearheading search efforts by Maritime New Zealand's Rescue Coordination Centre, said rescuers weren't worried at first because there had been no distress call from the boat and its emergency locator beacon had not been activated.

The Nina

Authorities say the storm had winds gusting up to 110 km/h and waves of up to eight metres.

- Kevin Banaghan, who is spearheading search efforts, said the Nina won races when it was new and had been maintained in excellent condition. He added that it had a new engine installed recently that had created some initial leaking problems.

Banaghan said there are several possible scenarios, including the boat losing communications, drifting off course, or the crew taking to lifeboats. He said there's also a possibility the boat suffered a catastrophic failure and sank before anybody had time to react.

Blast near mosque

U.K. police arrest 75-year-old man

Police arrested a 75-year-old man Thursday on suspicion of causing an explosion after a homemade bomb went off near a mosque in Walsall, near the central England city of Birmingham.

Several mosques and Islamic centres in Britain have been vandalized since a soldier was killed in London in May, allegedly by Islamic extremists.

Superstorm victim's body lay hidden for more than 5 months

Forgotten victim. Search-and-rescue teams searched 30,000 homes in areas hit by storm, but didn't think to enter trailer in vacant lot

In the chaotic days after Superstorm Sandy, an army of aid workers streamed onto the flood-ravaged Rockaway Peninsula looking for anyone who needed help.

Health workers and National Guard troops went door to door. City inspectors checked thousands of dwellings for damage. Seaside neighbourhoods teemed with utility crews, Red Cross trucks and crews clearing debris.

Yet, even as the months dragged on, nobody thought to look inside the tiny construction trailer rusting away in a junk-filled lot at the corner of Beach 40th Street and Rockaway Beach Boulevard.

If they had, they would have found the body of Keith Lancaster, a quiet handyman who appeared to have been using the trailer as a home the night Sandy sent 1.5 metres of water churning through the neighbourhood.

It took until April 5 before an acquaintance finally went to check on the 62-year-old's whereabouts and found his partially skeletonized remains. His body lay near a calendar that hadn't been turned since October and prescription pill bottles last refilled in the fall.

New York City's medical examiner announced this week that Lancaster had drowned, making him the 44th person ruled to have died in New York City because of the storm.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Keith Lancaster

- Neighbourhood residents described Lancaster as a loner and something of a drifter, and police said he had never been reported missing.
- No one stepped forward to claim his body from the city morgue, either, after he was finally discovered this spring.
- A police missing person squad is still trying to identify any relatives.

A dilapidated trailer sits on blocks in a trash-strewn lot in the Queens borough of New York. Thought to be vacant, the trailer went unsearched after Superstorm Sandy flooded the area in late 2012. More than five months after the storm, the body of Keith Lancaster was found inside on April 5, 2013. JAKE PEARSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

India. Journalist fired after riding on villager's back in news clip

An Indian cable-news channel has fired a journalist who sat on the shoulders of a villager so his feet didn't get wet in ankle-deep water while covering floods in India's Uttarakhand state.

"What he did was very inhuman. You cannot ride on someone's back for a story. We terminated him on Tuesday," Nishant Chaturvedi, channel head at News Express, told The Telegraph.

Narayan Pargaien triggered outrage after a video showing him speaking into the camera while sitting on the shoulders of a villager went viral online.

The reporter said the stunt wasn't his idea, and then made a bad situation worse when he blamed his cameraman. He also claimed that the survivor, who can be seen wobbling under the strain while standing in ankle-deep water, put him onto his shoulders as a sign of respect.

Chaturvedi said the channel did not broadcast the clip because it found it "highly distasteful."

"He sent the clip to us. We were shocked to see him sitting on the poor man. You have to be a part of the people and not ride on them," he said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Revolution 2.0 for Egypt?

Egyptians watch President Mohammed Morsi's televised speech at a bar in Cairo, Wednesday. All eyes are on Egypt as the country is set once again for massive protests, expected on Sunday. MANU BRABO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A nation in a state of agitation. Unrest in Egypt could reach a tipping point Sunday, the 1-year anniversary of Brotherhood rule

deena.douara@metronews.ca

Two days after I arrive in Cairo to see family earlier this month, my uncle whisks me away to a protest at the Ministry of Culture.

That's Egypt today, protests have become a family affair. With this weekend marking the one-year anniversary of the Muslim Brotherhood taking power, you worry about the safety of loved ones.

This particular protest on June 11 turns out to be a shi-shi demonstration in a wealthy Cairo neighbourhood. President Mohammed Morsi has replaced the culture minister and others with Muslim Brotherhood members. Many criticize the changes as crude and corrupt, though others suggest he must excise old officials to begin anew.

I lived in Egypt for five years until 2009, and visited again months after the 2011 revolution. It was a time of uncertainty and insecurity, but also of some optimism and rebuilding. That has all but vanished.

The one-year anniversary is Sunday. Protests have already begun and bloodshed is expected. People are asking if we'll become like Syria? Could Salafis win an election? What of the plummeting economy and security?

On a stage outside the ministry, a Tahrir Square protest singer performs a call-and-response song. Artists and intellectuals dot the crowd.

Individuals stand between cars with petitions calling for early elections and people honk in support.

The next day, I eye a young man in the women's-only metro car with suspicion. After other vendors pass, he rallies the women to demonstrate on the 30th. There will be bussing to three sites and if they can't go, then protest in front of your home, he insists. "Don't be afraid," he yells, repeatedly. A woman tells the rest to say "Amen."

Another woman confronts him, telling him that we all know where his support really comes from. Other passengers are pragmatic. "We have to give (Morsi) time, we need stability."

Days later, on the metro again, a woman calls for signatures. "Everyone's signed by now," a passenger tells her. Arguments erupt across the evening car.

I was with a friend when a stylish young woman said she wouldn't sign — she and her husband work in tourism and just as things are getting to normal, protests threaten their livelihoods.

I walk with a friend the next day around Old Cairo. An older man mutters to nobody that Morsi will be good for the country so there will be fewer people like us around. Tourists? Women? Women without a headscarf? Only the disdain is understood.

When I take a cab home with a woman already inside, it's clear they've been discussing politics. The driver asks if I've signed the petition. I hesitate and they wonder aloud if perhaps my father is Brotherhood. He is not. Later when I jot in my notepad, he half-jokingly suspects I'm recording their information.

The woman doesn't know whether to blame Morsi or the revolution for unemployment that's driven young neighbours to drug addiction. The driver, too, had lost his job as a government staffer. When she says the old regime was better, the driver disagrees: he says the 30th had better not mean bringing back the old.

In my last days I visit conservative relatives and wonder whether they support the Brotherhood. I learn they don't — my cousin thinks Morsi is incompetent, idiotic, and deceitful (the most common criticism against the Brotherhood). But he thinks things could get much worse. The opposition have no plan, no candidate. Blood will be shed, and for what? He fears that old regime sympathizers or paid thugs will be among protesters, even posing as Brotherhood, to incite violence.

I leave Egypt confused. And worried. I have family members on the front lines. Relatives have lost everything in the plunging economy and once-proud Egyptians are witnessing the decline of their country as it's torn along religious and sectarian lines.

And I wait to see what will become of Egypt's second – perhaps — revolution in my lifetime.

"Before, people protested on Fridays. Now it's Sunday, Tuesday, Saturday, Monday; doctors, teachers, judges, those protesting the lack of gas, water, employment, those cut off from their land and whose salaries have been cut. Every day there's something."

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

A man admitted in court on Thursday to shooting and killing Anthony Smith, who gained notoriety in death after a photo emerged that appeared to show him with Toronto's mayor. But his lawyer suggested there may be "further developments."

Nisar Hashimi, 23, entered an early guilty plea to manslaughter and aggravated assault just three months after Smith, 21, was shot dead outside a downtown Toronto nightclub and Muhammad Khattak, 19, was wounded.

Hashimi had been charged with first-degree murder. Smith's sister and mother said outside court that though the plea to lesser charges wasn't the outcome they had expected, they can now move on.

Smith's sister, Kamelia Taylor, lashed out at a throng of reporters, saying it was "disgusting" that no one cared about her brother's death until a picture emerged appearing to show him with the mayor.

Mandela's condition improves

Nelson Mandela's health improved overnight Wednesday, and although his condition remains critical, it is now stable, the South African government said on Thursday.

One of the former president's daughters said he is still opening his eyes and reacting to the touch of his family even though his situation is precarious.

The report that the health of the 94-year-old anti-apartheid leader had taken a turn for the better came amid a growing sense in South Africa that Mandela was approaching the end of his life.

Well-wishers have delivered flowers and messages of support to the Pretoria hospital where he is being treated, and prayer sessions were held around the country on Thursday.

Eiffel Tower reopens after strike

France's Eiffel Tower has reopened after a rare two-day workers' strike. The union representing most of the Eiffel Tower's 300 workers called the walkout Tuesday during negotiations this week over salary raises, company profit-sharing policy and other issues. The 124-year-old tower gets about 25,000 tourists daily — like the couple seen in this photo on a rainy day this past May. Though it is scheduled to be open every day, it occasionally closes because of suicide threats, bomb threats — or strikes.

CRTC gives green light to Astral deal

Second time around. Bell's revised takeover bid approved after firm promises to sell some specialty TV channels and radio stations

Canada's communications regulator cleared the way for the country's newest telecom colossus Thursday, approving Bell's retooled $3.4-billion bid for Astral Media and its coveted TV specialty channels and radio stations.

Bell's original bid for Astral was rejected by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission last fall on the grounds that it wasn't in the best interests of Canadians.

But the regulator said the revised bid, in which Bell agreed to sell some of Astral's specialty TV channels and radio stations, satisfied its concerns that the company would be too dominant in the market.

"I would like to emphasize that the CRTC's approval of this transaction, with the measures we have imposed, is in the public interest," said CRTC chairman Jean-Pierre Blais. "It serves the objectives set out by Parliament in the Broadcasting Act for the Canadian broadcasting system."

Coveted content

- Bell's parent company, BCE Inc., has said it wants to buy Astral to put its content across traditional TV, computers, smartphones and tablets.
- Astral's English pay TV service, The Movie Network, and French-language pay TV service Super Ecran would be key providers of shows and movies.

Pay equity. Canada Post, union end 30-year fight

The cheques are finally going in the mail. Canada Post and the Public Service Alliance of Canada have reached a settlement in the country's longest running pay-equity dispute.

"We are extremely happy about this. I'm very proud of our victory," said PSAC national president Robyn Benson. "It's a long time in coming. It's been 30 years."

Benson says as many as 30,000 people could be eligible for a portion of the settlement, which is estimated at $250 million with interest.

Cheques will begin to be sent out in August, but Canada Post cautions that it is a slow process to calculate how much each eligible individual receives. A spokesman said 60 people are working full time on sorting through documents and data. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Another era

- When the union first filed the complaint in 1983, Pierre Trudeau was still prime minister and millions watched the final episode of the television show M*A*S*H.
- The union argued that 2,300 mostly female clerical employees were doing comparable work to the mostly male letter-sorters and carriers, but earned substantially less.

Aeroplan. Points should be easier to redeem, firm says

The company that runs the Aeroplan customer loyalty program wants to make its travel rewards easier to accumulate and to redeem and is prepared to replace CIBC as its bank credit-card partner.

Aimia Inc. said Thursday that it's ready to partner with TD Bank in 2014 and drop CIBC at the end of this year unless CIBC matches contractual terms offered by TD.

Aimia chief executive Rupert Duchesne said Aeroplan is still tops in Canada but competition from RBC's Visa Avion credit card and from TD's Travel Visa card has been a factor.

"I want to see Aeroplan become the undisputable No. 1 again and to do that we need to grow and we'll only grow if we have a better proposition for Aeroplan members," Duchesne said.

That means making it easier for consumers who want to use their points for travel. Duchesne noted that it can take more time and points for holders of the Aeroplan Classic Visa, one of the cards offered by CIBC, to redeem travel points.

1 Oh Canada (Say whaa?). CBC Music wanted to spice up our country's national anthem for Canada Day, so they recruited domestic beat boxer KRNFX, national vocal treasure Maiko Watson, and seasoned producer Ian Blackwood. The result is a righteous hip-hop groove for young Liberals and New Democrats alike. Check them out on YouTube, yo! One time (one time).

2 Smart screen. Research from the University of London ends a tradition of lies parents perpetuated about the harmful effects of TV. The study revealed that kids who watched more did better in school than their more moderate-viewing counterparts. Subsequent studies also showed that your dog likely did not retire to a ranch, your face will not stay like that, and no matter how many times you do it, you will not go blind!

3 Oh, Paula. What kind of world do we live in when we can't throw a simple plantation-style wedding complete with black servants, or abuse ethnic employees without being labelled "racist"? It's like getting arrested for fraud, and pleading "not guilty," saying, "Hey, I'm just a drug dealer."

4 Boyfriend. Media reports show that Biebs is taking his bad-ass image to the next level by publicly making out with a married woman. At 22 years old, Jordan Ozuna has been separated almost as long as she was married, but she is still married, according to her estranged mother-in-law. Yet, she fools around with Biebs.

5 Growing up Kardashian. Despite endowing their child with the moniker of North West, sources close to the couple say that Kim and Kanye are wonderful parents. Kim says she enjoys being a mother. Sure, it's tough, waking up in the middle of the day, supervising the nanny, looking out for possible allergies to fruits or nuts, or unnatural fabrics, but as long as she can hold her baby, for just a few minutes before each mani-pedi, it's all worth it.

6 C'est la Vie. This week in 1974, French crooner Charles Aznavour hit No. 1 in the U.K. with She. At 50, he was the oldest living male to top the charts in Britain. Even though his own peeps didn't go for it, the song became a classic and was covered 25 years later by Elvis Costello for the movie Notting Hill.

7 The Iron Sheik. Old-school wrestling fans will remember Hulk Hogan's notorious nemesis. Hossein Khosrow Vaziri, former Olympic wrestler and bodyguard for the Shah of Iran, has an incredible story. Persian-Canadian brothers Jian and Page, a.k.a. The Magen Boys, have been gathering footage for years and a powerful film has emerged. To learn about the upcoming documentary and this fascinating man, visit indiegogo.com for the Iron Sheik Story.

8 Busting balls. This week, the now-former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez was charged with first-degree murder, and Cleveland Browns rookie Ausar Walcott was charged with attempted murder, making a grand total of 36 NFL players to be arrested this year. League officials are up in arms about the allegations, but I think the problem is obvious. Cops just prefer basketball.

Bandcamp is a website that boasts a limitless selection of music you can buy directly from the artist, with the added bonus of allowing you to preview songs in full before you buy. Here are a few Canadian artists worth a listen.

Jim Guthrie
Takes Time: Jim Guthrie's output has been so consistently excellent, it's starting to border on obnoxious, and this is no different. Think clever folk music with hushed vocal and lush production. (jimguthrie.bandcamp.com)

Isosine
Mashup Manifesto II: Tossed-off collisions like Nine Inch Nails and Carly Rae Jepsen are giving mashups a dirty name. But Isosine's experiments are lovingly nurtured enough to pull off using a Nicki Minaj beat to turn The Proclaimers' 500 Miles into a sweet Top 40 ballad. (isosine.bandcamp.com)

Synopsis

Channing Tatum plays John Cale, a divorced father of one who desperately wants to impress his daughter Emily (Joey King) by getting a job as security for the president of the United States (Jamie Foxx). On the day of his Secret Service job interview some very bad men (there will be no spoilers here!) invade the White House, disabling the security forces and gaining control of the president's home. Separated from his daughter, John gets some on-the-job training as he becomes POTUS' defacto guard while shooting, stabbing and fisticuffing his way to his daughter's rescue.

White House Down opens this weekend in theatres. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Been there, bombed that

White House Down. The Jamie Foxx flick isn't your typical blow 'em up blockbuster but it doesn't do much to set itself apart either

Richard: Mark, unlike the virtually identical Olympus Has Fallen, the Gerard Butler White House disaster flick that opened earlier this year, White House Down spends half-an-hour of its sprawling 137 minutes introducing the characters, which is 29 minutes more than we got in Butler's film. There's loads and loads of not terribly interesting talking, then the dome blows off the White House and director Roland Emmerich's genius for making things go boom comes into play. From that point on, it's fun stuff.

Mark: And the question becomes which is the better flick? White House Down has bigger stars, more expensive production and more action than Olympus Has Fallen. But if we use plausibility as a guideline, I think Olympus has a bit of an edge. That film almost felt like an indie, and its relative cheapness worked for it. I'm not saying that White House Down isn't fun, but there were lots of times I just didn't believe it, starting with the idea that Jamie Foxx could be elected president. On the other hand, James Woods is very believable. Too believable, maybe.

RC: Woods does disgruntled very well. I won't say any more about Woods — there will be no spoilers here — but I can say that this is a talkier-than-usual action movie. But by and large the chit chat is entertaining. Best line in the movie? "That's President Sawyer, and he has a rocket launcher!" I loved that the cheese factor was ramped up to 11 for the last hour-and-a-half.

MB: Yes, I enjoyed that too. And there's a bit of comedy thrown in. Nicolas Wright is terrific as a White House guide with SNL timing. But the director, Roland Emmerich, may have some explaining to do. This is the second time he's blown up the White House (Independence Day being the first), and I'm no Freudian, but as a foreign national he may be receiving a visit from some Homeland Security in the near future.

RC: He's the master of disaster! He's never met a monument he didn't want to destroy. Whether it be bad weather à la The Day After Tomorrow or a worldwide cataclysm as in his global warming epic 2012, the director can't seem to stop himself from trashing beloved landmarks.

MB: I just heard there's a Canadian version of this film being produced where terrorists take over 24 Sussex Dr. and get into a bitter debate with the government over who pays the utility bills.

Comic actress back 'on' in sequel

Despicable Me 2. Kristen Wiig talks about being shy off the clock, and missing Saturday Night Live

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Kristen Wiig is trying to deal with the fact that she's always expected to be 'on.'

The comic actress and Saturday Night Live vet has made a name for herself with outlandish characters and hilarious writing, but she's actually quite shy and reserved when she's not on the clock. Unfortunately, when promoting a massive animated film like Despicable Me 2, that's not very often.

"I mean, in an interview situation I am aware that I'm being recorded and written about, so there's a kind of a persona you have to bring out a little bit," she admits. "I find that people who interview me expect probably more of a comedic personality than in real life."

Wrestling with those perceptions has perhaps gotten easier now that she's left SNL, where she became a standout over seven seasons with crazy characters like the Target Lady. She even enjoyed a touching kind of send-off — with each cast member and creator Lorne Michaels dancing with her during a final sketch — most other retiring SNL actors don't enjoy.

With a year's time now between Wiig and her tearful farewell from SNL, she admits she's finally getting used to not being on the sketch comedy mainstay.

"I do miss it," she admits. "It's getting easier now because they're on (summer]) hiatus. I don't imagine what they're doing — not in a creepy way, but just ... it was such a big part of my life for seven years and it was a transition to leave. But it's getting better."

For her new addition to the Despicable Me world, Wiig was given some touchstones from one of her famous predecessors to work with: She plays Lucy, a brassy, clumsy redhead — who reminds viewers more than a little of Lucille Ball — tasked with roping retired super-villain Gru (Steve Carell) into a mission. "That's all they gave me. 'Her name is Lucy, she has red hair, go!'" Wiig says with a laugh. "I had never played a character like that before that was so enthusiastic, I guess. She's very excited."

Gru (Steve Carell) attempts to understand his new partner, Lucy (Kristen Wiig), in Despicable Me 2, summer 2013's much-anticipated followup to Universal Pictures and Illumination Entertainment's blockbuster comedy adventure Despicable Me. HANDOUT

Lucy is also fairly fearless, a trait Wiig humbly declines to apply to herself. "Um … no," she laughs. "I don't know, in some ways, I guess. But I don't think anyone is 100 per cent fearless."

The Heat

Director. Paul Feig

Stars. Sandra Bullock, Melissa McCarthy

Sarah Ashburn (Oscar winner Sandra Bullock) is an uptight FBI agent teamed with tough-talking Boston street cop Shannon Mullins (Melissa McCarthy) to bring down a murderous drug dealer. This odd couple, buddy cop dynamic is as old as the movies, so you'd hope for the performances to breath new life into the film's withered lungs. Instead we get the same old from two good performers. With a gag to giggle ratio of about five-to-one, more jokes miss than hit. McCarthy tries hard to raise a smile but she doesn't do anything here we haven't seen her do before and better. Family, friends and fans bid final ciao to Sopranos star

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

Jamie Lynn-Sigler, who played Tony's daughter Meadow on The Sopranos, sobbed in front of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in New York City on Thursday morning at the funeral of James Gandolfini.

The New York Times reports that almost the entire cast of The Sopranos was there, including Edie Falco, Joe Pantoliano, Dominic Chianese, Steve Schirripa, Aida Turturro, Vincent Curatola and Michael Imperioli.

New Jersey Governor Chris Christie, Hilaria and Alec Baldwin, John Turturro, and David Chase were also on hand to say goodbye to the famed actor.

In a somewhat unheard of move, the public was also allowed to attend. The Times reports that two lines formed before the service: One for those who knew Gandolfini personally and one for those who didn't.

One of those waiting in that line was fan Gwen Gibbs, who drove from Kentucky to give her respects.

"I am not sure how to put it in words," she says. "He made the character of Tony Soprano feel like a real person, like someone you knew. When I heard he had died I hoped it was a hoax."

Justin Bieber GETTY IMAGES

Justin case: Did Bieber bust out some black belt moves in 2012?

As if he didn't have enough current trouble dogging him, Justin Bieber's past is now coming back to haunt him. The singer is being sued for assault by a paparazzo over a May 2012 scuffle outside a Calabasas, Calif., shopping centre, according to TMZ. The photographer, Jose Hernandez Duran, claims that Bieber "physically attacked" him, leaping out of his car and hitting him with "a martial-arts-style kick" to Duran's midsection. The suit alleges that Bieber's then-girlfriend, Selena Gomez, put a stop to the incident and later apologized to Duran, saying, "I'm sorry, I don't know why he did that."

Lily-Rose says never again: Depp's daughter revokes her Belieber status

More bad news for Justin Bieber: He's losing fans rapidly, at least according to Johnny Depp, who says his 14-year-old daughter, Lily-Rose, who previously swooned for the Canadian pop star, has gone off him. "She thinks that Bieber is obviously talented and stuff, but she's now moving into other arenas of music in her life," Depp tells David Letterman during an interview. "She prefers I didn't go to concerts with her, especially don't take her to concerts. No, out of the question."

Do I hear a wedding, Bell? Time to set a date as Cali ditches Prop 8

Though they've been engaged for more than two years, Kristen Bell and Dax Shepard have made it clear that they had no plans to wed while their gay and lesbian friends couldn't, but with California's Proposition 8 dead and the federal Defense of Marriage Act ruled unconstitutional it looks like it's time to set a date. "They have been waiting for this day so they can officially wed," a rep for the couple tells E! News. "They are beyond thrilled for their friends in the gay community."

Made in Canada successes

Canadian success. There are plenty of great products Canadians have invented

CHRIS EDWARDS
For Metro

Lots of everyday products have a Canadian connection.

While we may not brag about them the way we do the telephone, or insulin, these gadgets come in pretty handy, pretty often. Here are a few:

Paint Roller

There's an art to painting a wall well, and most people never, ever, master it. And they never have to, thanks to Toronto's Norman Breakey, who invented the paint roller in 1940.

The paint roller was invented by a Toronto man in 1940. VEER

Ski-Doo

This quintessential Canadian contraption isn't as old as you might think: Bombardier only began manufacturing them in 1959. While snowmobiles had existed for decades, engine-sizes had limited them to larger, bulkier forms. Joseph-Armand Bombardier took advantage of newer, lightweight engines to build his Ski-Doo, and the results were duplicated widely.

Alkaline Battery

The power of Canadian ingenuity was on display back in 1955, when engineer Lewis Urry, of Pontypool, Ont., invented the first long-lasting alkaline battery. Yes, he was working in Cleveland at the time, but it still counts.

Garbage Bag

The modern garbage bag was developed independently, after the Second World War, by three Canadians: Harry Wasylyk, of Winnipeg; Frank Plomp, of Toronto; and Larry Hanson, an employee at a Union Carbide plant in Lindsay, Ont.. Clearly, this was an invention worth keeping.

Snow Blower

It's still the best way to get snow off your driveway and onto your neighbour's lawn. The snow blower dates back to 1925 — the brainchild of one Arthur Sicard, of Saint-Leonard-de-Port-Maurice, QC. Sicard's truck-sized prototype must have been a source of immense satisfaction to him. He had come up with the concept at least as far back as 1894.

The snow blower is another Canadian invention. VEER

The Ski-Doo was also invented here. VEER

BlackBerry

Though the last few years have been shaky for its Waterloo, Ont.-based developer, Research In Motion (now known globally as "BlackBerry"), the BlackBerry remains a go-to device for millions of businesspeople, political types, and regular people, worldwide. The first BlackBerry, little more than an email-enabled pager, was released in 1999.

Caulking Gun

For adults, it's an essential home-repair tool. For kids, it's a viable substitute for a laser pistol. The caulking gun was invented by Theodore Witte, of Chilliwack, B.C., in 1894.

The caulking gun was invented by Theodore Witte. VEER

Instant Replay

One of the most significant features of modern sport debuted, modestly, on a 1955 television broadcast of Hockey Night in Canada, when producer George Retzlaff offered his viewers a kinescope recording of a goal. Today, instant replay is a part of all major televised sports.

Honourable mention: The Zipper

Did a Canadian invent the zipper? Many Canadians think so. And they're wrong. Engineer Gideon Sundback was born in Sweden, immigrating to the United States in 1905. In 1917, he was issued a patent for the zipper (then called a 'separable fastener'). One of the first places it was manufactured was St. Catharines, Ont., but that's as close to the glory as we get.

Lewis Urry invented the first long-lasting alkaline battery. VEER

DELIVERING SOLUTIONS FOR A GROWING WORLD

FOOD SECURITY A MAJOR ISSUE FOR NEXT GENERATION

CONTRIBUTED

As the challenge of feeding the world's population grows, so too does PotashCorp's ability to deliver crop nutrients – and Canadian-made solutions – needed to improve global food production.

"Food security is likely to be one of the biggest issues facing the next generation," says PotashCorp President and Chief Executive Officer Bill Doyle. "Our ability to help farmers increase production will be increasingly valuable – around the world and here in Saskatchewan."

The company is nearing completion of an $8.3 billion expansion program – including more than $6 billion in Saskatchewan – that will nearly double its operational capability in potash. The expansions, initiated in 2003 will prepare the company for long-term growth.

The impact of PotashCorp's expansion program is already evident, helping Saskatchewan's economy become one of the strongest in the world.

An independent study by Informetrica estimates that PotashCorp's expansions are creating an estimated 36,000 jobs in related industries in the province – with more opportunities for construction workers and tradespeople, generating new income being spent in retail stores and restaurants.

In addition to expanding its production capabilities, PotashCorp is investing in initiatives dedicated to improving food security.

In 2012, it became a founding partner in the Global Institute for Food Security, which will explore Saskatchewan solutions that can improve food production and distribution around the world.

PotashCorp also entered a three-year partnership with Free The Children, enabling the Canadian organization to add an Agriculture and Food Security pillar to its international Adopt A Village model. In addition to providing funding, PotashCorp is sharing its knowledge in a hands-on way, with 25 employees scheduled to work on a development model in Kenya this summer.

"Food production and food security are issues that our people and our company are passionate about," says Doyle. "When we come to work, we know we can help improve lives – here in Canada and around the world."

We help feed a growing world. And a growing economy.

While our crop nutrients help farmers grow more food around the world, our work helps our economy grow here at home.

Our $6.1 billion expansion program in Saskatchewan is creating new opportunities that stretch from construction and trades to retail stores and restaurants. We're helping to feed a growing world – and a growing economy.

LIQUID ASSETS

Hey, Canada, this is your long weekend. The one where you celebrate our great country with family, friends and grilled goodness.

Since this coming Monday is all about national pride, you all need to step up and fill your glass with some home-grown liquid.

It could be beer (there's a sea of amazing craft brews out there), it could be a spirit (think one of our classic Canadian whiskies) or, of course, a local wine.

Selection of our wines varies across the country. While there are some big national brands, the industry is really led by artisan winemakers producing smaller quantities of pretty fantastic juice that doesn't flow far from home.

Ontario's Henry of Pelham Winery has been an advocate for quality Canuck vino since the mid-'80s. Its 2011 Sibling Rivalry White ($12.95 to $16.99) is an irreverent New World wonder made from a blend of riesling, chardonnay and gewürztraminer.

The trio conspires to create an aromatic mix of fruit cocktail, citrus and subtle spice that rolls across the palate and makes for both an open-minded food partner and refreshing cocktail wine.

Whatever you may be drinking on July 1, make it Canadian! PRICES REFLECT RANGE ACROSS COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Canada, keep your meat tangy this long weekend

Chicken drumettes are the thick meaty part of the wing; they almost look like a mini leg. Here, they star in a delicious Herb and Spice Marinated Barbecue Chicken Drumettes dish.

Chef Richard Julien added 10 per cent cream to the marinade to add moisture, which helps keep chicken from drying out on the grill. Serve with an extra thick tangy sour cream dip.

This recipe serves four. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

Ingredients

- 16 chicken drumettes (about 750 g/1 1/2 lb)
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) 10 per cent half-and-half cream
- 1/2 small onion, peeled
- 3 cloves garlic, peeled
- 7.5-cm (3-inch) piece of ginger, peeled and minced
- Zest and juice of 1 lemon (about 45 ml/3 tbsp of juice)
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) fresh cilantro leaves
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) butter, melted
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) each Dijon mustard, liquid honey and apple cider vinegar
- 10 ml (2 tsp) each ground cumin and coriander
- 5 ml (1 tsp) each ground turmeric and cayenne
- Salt and pepper, to taste

1. Pull skin off chicken drumettes; place in 20-cm (8-inch) square glass baking dish or similar size stainless-steel pan.

2. In food processor, combine, cream, onion, garlic, ginger, lemon zest and juice, cilantro, butter, mustard, honey, vinegar, cumin, coriander, turmeric, cayenne, salt and pepper; process until smooth. Pour marinade over chicken; cover and refrigerate for 2 hours to allow flavours to develop.

3. Heat grill to medium-high. Remove chicken from marinade and place on baking sheet lined with paper towels. Place chicken pieces on greased grill; reduce temperature to medium-low. Grill with lid down for 9 minutes, turn chicken over, close lid and grill for 8 minutes or until juices run clear from chicken when tested with a fork. CHEF RICHARD JULIEN OF CHEF LIVE! Potato Salad gets a peppery punch

1. Place potatoes in large pot and add enough water to cover them by 1 inch. Bring to boil and cook until potatoes are just tender, about 15 to 20 minutes. Drain the potatoes, then spread on a rimmed baking sheet to cool. Sprinkle the cooling potatoes with the vinegar, then refrigerate for 30 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, in bowl combine the sour cream, barbecue sauce, chili powder, garlic powder, black pepper and cayenne pepper. Stir in the roasted red peppers, scallions and cheddar.

3. When the potatoes are cool, gently stir them into the sour cream mixture until well coated. Season with salt. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Judge denies Hernandez bail

Former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez, charged with murder for what prosecutors say was the execution-style killing of a friend near his house, was denied bail on Thursday.

Hernandez's lawyer argued that his celebrity status means even if he wanted to flee he couldn't and that the case against him is circumstantial.

But Bristol County Assistant District Attorney Bill McCauley called the evidence in the June 17 slaying of Odin Lloyd overwhelming. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA draft. Cleveland's Toronto love affair continues with first overall pick of swingman

Anthony Bennett walks on stage after being selected No. 1 overall by the Cleveland Cavaliers at the NBA draft on Thursday night in New York. MIKE STOBE/GETTY IMAGES

Anthony Bennett made Canadian basketball history Thursday, becoming the first player from north of the border to be selected first overall in the NBA draft.

The Cleveland Cavaliers stunned the league by selecting the UNLV freshman forward, who has starred for Canada's junior team and was the Mountain West Conference player of the year.

"I'm just as surprised as everybody else," Bennett said. "I didn't really have any idea who's going No. 1 or who was going No. 2. I heard everything was up for grabs. But I'm just really happy, glad that I have this opportunity, and I just got to thank God for everything."

Tristan Thompson of Toronto was selected No. 4 by the Cavaliers in the 2011 draft, making him the highest Canadian draft pick before Thursday. Teen phenom Andrew Wiggins of Thornhill, Ont., is projected to go No. 1 in 2014.

"Yeah. It's just crazy. Made history. I can't really complain about that," said Bennett, who had 25 to 30 family members with him in New York. "It's just like a long-time dream that I had since I first started playing basketball, even though it was six or seven years ago. It's just crazy. Next year with Wiggins, hopefully he does well at Kansas. I'm rooting for him. I'm pretty sure he'll get that No. 1 spot."

Steve Nash of Victoria, taken 15th overall by Phoenix in 1996 and currently the GM of Canada's men's team, retweeted the NBA's announcement adding: "Proud on Proud!"

Prime Minister Stephen Harper posted on Twitter "Congrats to @AnthonyBennett for being the first Cdn ever drafted #1 overall in the NBA draft. Good luck in Cleveland, we're all behind you."

There was suspense right until the end, either because the Cavs were unsure who they wanted or were trying to trade the pick. Most predictions had them taking one of the big men, Nerlens Noel or Alex Len.

Bennett has been sidelined since having rotator-cuff surgery in May, and didn't participate in the draft combine or pre-draft workouts. The 20-year-old clearly impressed in his interviews — he interviewed for the top-five teams in the draft — and his play last season.

Bennett had surgery a few weeks after the Runnin' Rebels lost in the second round of March Madness, but said Wednesday he wasn't concerned the injury would hurt his draft stock. He was bang on.

The Dallas Mavericks selected centre Kelly Olynyk, from Kamloops, B.C., with the 13th overall pick in the draft.

- The Boston Celtics selected Brazilian Lucas Nogueira at 16 amid reports that they were sending him to Dallas along with a pair of second-rounders for Olynyk.

Raonic stumbles again in second round

Milos Raonic lost his second-round match at Wimbledon to Igor Sijsling on Thursday in London. MIKE HEWITT/GETTY IMAGES

Milos Raonic didn't mince words when describing his latest early exit from the All England club.

Raonic was eliminated in the second round at Wimbledon on Thursday as he dropped a 7-5, 6-4, 7-6 (4) decision to Igor Sijsling of the Netherlands.

The loss left Montreal's Eugenie Bouchard as the last remaining Canadian player in singles competition. Ottawa's Jesse Levine also dropped a 6-2, 7-6 (7), 6-3 decision to eighth-seeded Juan Martin Del Potro at Wimbledon on Thursday.

Sijsling needed just over two hours to complete the straight-sets victory over Raonic. "At one stage I lost 12 points in a row — pathetic," Raonic said. "When I did have chances he played well and I couldn't do what I wanted to do.

"Wimbledon's still my favourite tournament. It's me that's the problem, not the court."

Raonic had opportunities to break Sijsling in the second set and get back into the match, but the hard-serving Dutch native had an answer every time.

"At the end of the second set I had those three break points and he hit huge serves to save them. I didn't do enough with second serve and he put a lot of pressure on me," he said.

"He played much better than I expected. I was trying to force myself in the second set. He found the answers when I did get something going."

Raonic, the No. 17 seed from Thornhill, Ont., has now lost in the second round here in all three career appearances at the Grand Slam event.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
By all means, withdraw your support from a friend if they have let you down. It's not as if they weren't warned. You told them what would happen if they did not shape up.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Life is full of surprises and over the next couple of days you will be amazed by some of the things that happen. While others are too shocked to act, find ways to cash in.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Where business and financial matters are concerned, you can and you must look on the bright side today. If you let negative thoughts take hold, almost inevitably it will lead to negative events occurring.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
It might be better to clear the air today than allow a feud of some kind to drag on. Most likely there is no "right" or "wrong" involved, it's just that you see things in different ways. Can't you accept that?

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You don't have to conform to other people's standards just because they expect it of you. The only thing that matters is what you expect of yourself. Do what feels right and, if others don't like it, too bad.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
There are a few creative influences in your chart right now. Today, you need to decide what you're going to focus on. One thing done well is better than many things done poorly.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Make allowances for a friend's behaviour today. It is better to forgive and forget than make an issue of something you can't change. Besides, think of all the times they have forgiven you in the past.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The more you search for a solution to a problem, the further away it seems to get. Maybe you should take the hint and stop looking so hard. Everything will work out for the best when the time is right.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Watch out you don't spend more than you can afford today. If you do feel the need to splash out on something costly, make sure there is a money-back guarantee — just in case you change your mind.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You could be more emotional than usual over the next 24 hours. Hide your sensitive feelings from critics, who will play on them if they think it might damage your rep.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may have every reason to be annoyed but you are also advised to keep your feelings to yourself as much as possible. Don't let your own behaviour become an issue.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Let the world know what your opinions are, even if they are largely at odds with the way most people view things. The masses are easily manipulated but you have never followed the herd. SALLY BROMPTON
